I have started java instance with java -Djava.awt.headless=true I want to find out the application which is starting that.

A: You can use the Runtime.exec methods. To get the command-line arguments passed to a Java process, get the arguments of the subprocess, then get the "arguments" array for the current thread. The command-line arguments are the "args" array of the arguments array passed to the Process. For example, the following code will print out the command-line and the Java application file: public static void main(String[] args) { Process p = Runtime.getRuntime().exec(new String[] { "java" }); BufferedReader input = new BufferedReader(new InputStreamReader(p.getInputStream())); String line; while ((line = input.readLine()) != null) { System.out.println(line); } } (Note that depending on what Java application you are running, this might not give you the information you want.)

A: Your question is a bit unclear but if you want to know from what java process is the target java process, I would look at the command-line arguments passed to the process. You can get that from the Process object returned from Runtime. 3e33713323
