““HyperMotion Technology” will be a feature in FIFA 22 and this year’s FIFA Ultimate Team,” said Ivory Coast’s FIFA World Cup winner Didier Drogba. “I played with this technology when I was 16 and I could jump over two or three players at a time. I think it is going to be amazing and a real pleasure for me.” “I am so proud to be an innovator in the world of football and to create the next generation in what is a huge game for us at EA SPORTS,” said EA SPORTS FIFA Executive Producer and Creative Director, Peter Moore. “We love the idea of capturing the athlete’s movement in real-life from the real-life athletes and translating it into the virtual athlete. Because of this, we will be able to create the first soccer game to have a more authentic and fluid feel.” With “HyperMotion Technology,” player speed and ball control have also been improved. And when it comes to giving teams the best goalkeeper playing, doing more with less, the new diving system helps goalkeepers get off more saves than ever before. Another highlight is that “with ‘HyperMotion Technology,’ users will experience more intense and exciting gameplay through dribbling, acrobatic and vertical ball-handling skills,” said EA SPORTS FIFA Lead Engineer and Dribbling Master, Ricardo Miezan. “I even tested it and I can now flick the ball to my left from my right foot!” “FIFA is the world’s #1 sports franchise with hundreds of millions of people playing on FIFA platforms on a regular basis,” said FIFA Lead Producer, Ranjit Bajaj. “But when we set out to create the next generation of football, we wanted to create an experience that really feels like being there. And through the addition of ‘HyperMotion Technology’ our goal is to bring the player closer to the pitch and let you feel like a winner!” FIFA Ultimate Team and Seasons are also returning. And for the first time, players can be the owners of their own UEFA Champions League teams. And a brand new and expanded Ultimate Coach experience lets them manage their teams to improve their skills and to unlock the various equipment and playing features. “FIFA Ultimate Team is,
