Now players can truly feel the challenge and intensity of the game at the highest level in FIFA. The new system captures the full three-dimensional movement of key players during game play, including location, speed and acceleration, allowing each player to be represented accurately and react dynamically in game. HOW IT WORKS: Each player is represented on the pitch as a machine-learning avatar based on the player's 3D movement data. The three-dimensional path of the players is depicted as a high-definition 3D visual representation of the player on-screen. Each player's animations and actions are also represented in the game as realistic movements, demonstrating their intent and influencing the flow of the game. As players take and miss tackles, head and body checks, or dive, they transfer more momentum to the ball. This new momentum is represented in gameplay, showing in "souls" and "life" meter values, which help players make crucial decisions in the game. The game engine will also apply the penalty system with more accuracy, meaning players who break rules will be shown a more challenging penalty now. HOW IT LOOKS: The game also brings in a more realistic look. With improved ball physics, the ball reacts realistically to the players on the pitch. Along with new player animation, ball physics, and more detailed textures, players can be seen more clearly in the game. The new ball physics system improves the accuracy and responsiveness of ball behavior. The ball has been made slightly more lively, with increased air drag and better absorption and spread of energy upon impact with the pitch. Other dynamics improvements have included a tighter cross-directional flight variation, more realistic spin and angle variations, and controlled and predictable behavior on all surfaces. The new player animation system continues the legacy of getting closer to reality, showing the player's realistic efforts, motions and controls as they interact with the ball during gameplay. More movement animations and realistic vertical controls for player movement - particularly powerful when players need to push or pull on the ball - have been added to keep players grounded and to provide players with more freedom of movement. The new player animation system continues the legacy of getting closer to reality, showing the player's realistic efforts, motions and controls as they interact with the ball during gameplay. New goalkeeper animations have been added to accurately show players how they would move as they make blocking actions. Improved goalie handling and tactics will be brought to the pitch
