It will then teach you how to transfer all of your files and data and. With its enormous potential for renewable energy generation, the waste heat from the existing energy infrastructure, such as the existing power generating equipment, has been considered as an essential source for the development of new energy generation. It has been estimated that over 75% of the world's energy infrastructure has reached the end of its useful lifetime. The related thermal energy and heat remain in the waste heat of the existing power generation equipment even after their economical running. In many cases, thermal energy and heat are so much higher than the energy demands of surrounding environment that they can be considered as waste. In addition, an enormous amount of thermal energy and heat are wasted. In the semiconductor industry, radiation heat is an inevitable by-product during the fabrication process of semiconductor devices. The wafer temperature in vacuum environment will increase due to the emission of photons during the intense radiation. Under the vacuum environment, thermal radiation will be a main heat source which contributes to the wafer temperature rise. The wafer temperature is related to the material properties of the wafer and the condition of wafer surface, thereby leading to the change of wafer's property and surface morphology. In the semiconductor industry, one major problem is the radiation degradation of process equipment. The increasing wafer temperature accelerates the oxidation of chamber materials due to oxygen inside the chamber. As a result, the chamber materials will become non-conductive or very difficult to fabricate. Therefore, the lifetime of the chamber materials is shortened and the fabrication yield of semiconductor devices is degraded. If the wafer temperature can be decreased, the amount of oxygen inside the chamber will also be decreased. The radiation degradation of chamber materials will be reduced, thereby increasing the lifetime of the chamber materials and consequently improving the yield of semiconductor devices. One method to reduce the wafer temperature is to improve the heat transfer property of the chamber materials. For example, it is capable of using a chamber which has high heat conductivity. However, due to the dimension and structure of the chamber, it is usually difficult to keep the wafer surface even at
