The maxillary sinus is an important bone structure, and it suffers postoperative bone resorption. The aim of this study was to evaluate the 12-month clinical results of a newly designed bone substitute that contained a tetracycline hydrochloride (TC) scaffold. Fourteen patients with the diagnosis of maxillary sinus elevation were included in this prospective study. Seventeen dental implants were inserted in the maxillary sinus using the lateral approach and a tetracycline hydrochloride-loaded collagen sponge as a scaffold. The postoperative changes in the augmented maxillary sinus, bone density, bone height, and the implant survival rate were investigated at the implant placement, 4 weeks, and 1, 3, and 12 months after implant surgery, respectively. All implants were successful. After 12 months of follow-up, mean increase of vertical bone height was 9.2%, and the residual ridge index (RRRI) was 1.1. In the present study, the tetracycline hydrochloride-loaded collagen sponge was associated with less lateral osteogenesis than that induced by conventional freeze-dried cancellous bone allograft, but the implant success rate was comparable.Q: Azure Pipelines No 'Docker' Files Found in the Build Agent I am trying to set up a CI/CD pipeline using Azure Pipelines in order to deploy my Django app to an App Service plan. I am very new to CI/CD, so I suspect that I'm missing something, or I'm using Azure Pipelines incorrectly.
